In this modern era, many companies are competing to become a company that excels in competition. This makes their human resources their main focus. The low level of employee performance in a company can be seen in attendance at work due to a lack of employee discipline and ineffective use of time in carrying out work is also said to be a low level of employee performance (Yanti, 2022).

In this case, employee performance is a benchmark for organisations or companies to assess ability, productivity, and provide useful information for matters relating to employees. Employee performance is a very important thing in running a business in an organisation to achieve its goals. Performance is a result achieved by employees in their work according to certain criteria that apply to a job (Robbins, 2017). The success or failure of the implementation of individual tasks in an organisation is determined by the performance it achieves within a certain time.

The correlation coefficient (r) between the independent variable and the dependent variable is 0.819 or 81.9%. This shows that the correlation or relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable has a very strong level of relationship (included in the range of 0.80 - 1.00) which can be seen in Table 3.4. The coefficient of determination (R²) of 0.670 indicates that the independent variables, namely transformational leadership style (X1) and work motivation (X2) can explain the dependent variable, namely employee performance (Y) by 67%, while the remaining 33% is explained by other factors that are not included in this study.
